Hensel Says McCarthy Admitted Lack Of Charge Basis

Offered To Withdraw Case On Condition

WASHINGTON — (AP) H. Hensel said yesterday Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.) admitted he had no factual basis for charges he made against Hensel and offered to withdraw them if it could be done without making the senator appear a "damn fool."

Hensel, assistant secretary of defense who was dismissed as a principal midway in the McCarthy - Army hearings, said he refused McCarthy's offer without a "confession of error" and "That confession Sen. McCarthy refused to make publicly."

This latest echo of the seven-week hearings came as Hensel released an affidavit which he submitted for inclusion in the record. Based on what it contains, he said, "The motion to dismiss the charges against me should be reviewed and passed unanimously with a severe rebuke to Sen. McCarthy."

HENSEL SENT the affidavit with a letter dated June 16 to Sen. Mundt (R-SD), who presided over the hearings. He released it for publication yesterday at the Quantico, Va., Marine Corps base where he, and other Defense Department officials concluded a four-day conference.

Mundt declined to comment on Hensel's statements, but said the committee will decide in executive session whether to include the document in the record. No date has been fixed for the group's next meeting, he said.

McCarthy was not available for comment. After the hearings ended last Thursday, he left for a week's vacation without saying where he was going.

MUNDT SAID the end of the hearings left McCarthy free to resume investigations and hearings by the Senate Permanent Investigating Subcommittee. He said the ban which the committee voted on new probes by McCarthy expired at the end of the public hearings. McCarthy had stepped down from the chairmanship for the duration of the special hearings.

But Sen. Jackson (D-Wash.), a subcommittee member, said in an interview "it is inconceivable" that the subcommittee would tackle any new investigations before disposing of charges pending against members of its own staff. Jackson told newsmen the charges involving staff members "can be handled separately and apart" from over-all findings in the McCarthy-Army probe.

Haluska Hits At Doctors

PATTON, PA. (AP)—State Sen. John J. Haluska said yesterday doctors at Mifflin Hospital in nearby Spangler, who threaten to quit unless he resigns or is fired as administrator of the hospital, are "gunning" for him because he forbids "illegal operations."

The Cambria County Democrat said the doctors are using a controversy over a purported cancer cure to try to oust him.

Haluska said he won't resign and added he is sure the hospital's board of directors won't fire him.

"INSTEAD," said Haluska, "I'll do some firing myself when the smoke clears away."

Sixteen doctors comprising the hospital's staff told the board last Thursday they will resign en masse July 15 unless Haluska is removed from his post as administrator.

Their action came about a week after it was reported the hospital's nursing home was to be turned over to Harry M. Hoxsey of Dallas, Tex., as a cancer clinic.

Hoxsey recommends treatment of cancer with a medicine applied both internally and externally. The American Medical Assn. has labeled the treatment "cough medicine."

SNYDERSVILLE—Beverly Newell, 2, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Praetorius here, was reportedly injured by a car in a mishap near her home yesterday.

She was described as "in good condition" last night at East Stroudsburg General Hospital.

Rain Clouds Pile Up Over Hanoi As City Waits For Monsoon Plus New Rebel Attack

HANOI, INDOCHINA (AP)—Storm clouds piled over Hanoi yesterday as this sunburned war capital waited for overdue monsoon rains and a siege that may not come.

Communist-led Vietminh divisions which crushed Dien Bien Phu six weeks ago with human sea attacks have semi-circled Hanoi for two weeks and are now at bases 40 miles to the north and west, 55 miles to the southwest, and 90 miles to the south.

Vietminh supply convoys totaling hundreds of Molotov trucks and Red China supplied artillery and anti-aircraft batteries have pushed relentlessly forward to the outer defense perimeter of the Red River Delta despite almost daily French bombing, napalming and strafing.

APPARENTLY the rebels are in position to start a battle for the delta and Hanoi today, tomorrow or next week.

But the delta is teetering on the edge of the monsoon season and there has been speculation that if the rebels do not attack before the rains come, they will not attack until the rains quit some time in September—a view not held by Gen. Rene Cogen, commander of French Union forces in north Viet Nam.

The three-star general knows torrential rains would have a more adverse effect upon the French mobile columns, tanks and artillery than upon the "human sea" infantry attacks of the Vietminh—and he credits the rebel command with enough intelligence to know it also.

NEVERTHELESS there is in

Hanoi a growing belief that the Vietminh will hold off a major attack until they see if they can win north Viet Nam from a new French government without an all-out battle.

A number of French officers say privately what they will not say publicly: If Mendes-France succeeds with his new government, French efforts to hold on in north Viet Nam will be near an end.

They believe the rebels may hold off any major assault in hope of getting much of the delta by default.

Even if it does not work out that way, several well-placed Hanoi sources believe Hanoi itself will never be on the receiving end of rebel artillery. They believe Ho Chi Minh intends to preserve Hanoi and use it for his headquarters if he gains the delta.

Specs O'Keefe Is Reported Still Alive

BOSTON (AP)—Dist. Atty. Garrett H. Byrne said last night an associate of Joseph J. "Specs" O'Keefe, 47, a suspect in the $1,219,000 Brink's, Inc., robbery four and one-half years ago, has told authorities that O'Keefe was wounded in a machine gunning at a Dorchester housing project early last Wednesday.

Byrne said the information came from John Henry Carlson, who was picked up by police after the shooting. The district attorney quoted Carlson as saying he helped to get O'Keefe to a place of safety and that O'Keefe, missing since the shooting, "is still alive, unless something happened to him since."

"He'll come in and talk soon, I figure," Carlson said.

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, McCarthy Critic Stages Showdown Today In Maine's Primary

PORTLAND, MAINE (AP)—Sen. Margaret Chase Smith and Robert L. Jones, she a critic, he a champion of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.), stage their showdown for the Republican senatorial nomination in the Maine primary today.

Unless the omens are all wrong, Mrs. Smith will be an easy winner once the polls close at 7 p.m., EST, and the count starts rolling in for the only statewide contest on tap.

That's the consensus among politicians, political analysts and many plain people in the Pine Tree State. Voting, as a result, is expected to be light. The weather forecast for today is partly cloudy with scattered afternoon showers that may hold down the vote.

MRS. SMITH, 56, with 14 years in House and Senate behind her, never has gone down to defeat in an election.

Jones, 34, former assistant to Sen. Potter (R-Mich) and former Sen. Owen Brewster (R-Maine) never before has tried for public office. In attempting to break into the major league in politics with no seasoning in the minors, he has had an uphill pull all the way.

McCarthy never became a real issue in the campaign—only a hazy factor on the sidelines in that Mrs. Smith has objected to his Communist hunting methods for four years and Jones is 100 per cent for the Wisconsin senator and the way he does business.

THE SMITH-JONES campaign, over now except for last-minute

Two Deaths Hit Congress At Weekend

WASHINGTON (AP)—Funeral services will be held here today for Sen. Lester C. Hunt (D-Wyo.), who shot and fatally wounded himself in his Senate office Saturday.

The Senate will recess for the day out of respect for the senator, who served for six years as governor of Wyoming before coming to the Senate in 1949.

Hunt, 61, was one of two Congress members who died Saturday. Delegate Joseph R. Farrington (R-Hawaii) collapsed and died of a heart ailment. His body was found in his office last night.

ALTHOUGH no definite plans were made, officials said the House of Representatives probably would meet and adjourn early out of respect to the 56-year-old Farrington.

Funeral arrangements for the non-voting Hawaiian delegate were not completed yesterday.

Funeral services for Hunt will be held at 2 p. m. today at Trinity Episcopal Church here, conducted by the Rev. Raymond Ryland.

Hunt, worried about a kidney ailment, was found unconscious in his office Saturday morning. A 22 caliber rifle lay near him.

television appearances last night, has been one of attack and defense centering around Mrs. Smith's record.

Jones says it is a "do-nothing, say-nothing record" and the choice boils down to whether the people of Maine prefer his "Americanism" to the senator's "internationalism."

The senator says her record is a good one, of Americanism, Republicanism and anti-communism, a record "not easily belittled or convincingly misrepresented."

Except for upholding that record, she has ignored Jones entirely.

Mrs. Smith is standing by a prediction she will win by a large majority, Jones by a forecast of victory by 10,000 votes.

Miss Truman Thinks All Men Are Charming

By Leonard Randolph
SATURDAY afternoon — hours before the received word of her father's illness and serious operation—Margaret Truman arrived in Mount Airy for a pre-performance press conference.

On the terrace of Pocono Playhouse, Miss Truman sat and talked with reporters, photographers and newspaper executives from the Pocono Mountains region for an hour.

The former president's daughter will be making her legitimate stage debut tonight at 8:40 in a romantic play called "Autumn Crocus" by C. L. Anthony. Life magazine, Look, Time, Newsweek and all the major wire news services are expected to be on hand to "cover" the opening, thereby giving the Playhouse—and the Pocono—one of the biggest boost in years.

Chatting informally with reporters, Miss Truman was asked if she intended to continue with her career in the theater.

"I HAVE no plans for the Fall, if that's what you mean," she replied. "My contract with NBC has been extended and I have several television commitments for Fall and Winter."

She is continuing her music studies, she said, and there is a possible concert tour in the offing for Spring. Expressing no preference for TV, radio or theater, she said "I believe each of them supplements the others."

Asked whether she sings in tonight's play, Miss Truman laughed and said: "I'm sure no one will believe this but there is a song in the play and it's been there right from the beginning." Name of the song: "I Know Where I'm Going."

Undecided about which play to choose for her initial trial in theater, Miss Truman said she made up her mind when "Autumn Crocus" was recommended to her by Constance Collier, famous dramatic coach who worked with Margaret.

"IT'S A thoroughly charming play and I'm very fond of the part (an American schoolteacher on vacation)," she noted.

Miss Truman said she had "missed" her father's performance (on piano) with music union head Petrillo in Milwaukee last week. "I understand they got a little mixed up the first time around," she said "and had to start all over again."

"My father is a very good pianist, though," she declared vehemently. "He plays very well—and he does not play the 'Missouri Waltz'."

There is no serious romance in view at present, she replied in answer to a question. "Gov. Meyer (with whom her name has been linked) is a very charming man—but then they all are," she said. This is her "first trip to the Poconos—and I think the scenery is very beautiful," she said.

ALTHOUGH SHE "loves New York City" and thinks it "a delightful place to live," she still calls Missouri "home," she said. Like herself, her father has a "wonderful time when he comes to New York," she said, even during the early morning "constitutional" which have helped make him famous.

Asked how she felt about "opening night," Miss Truman smiled broadly and said: "I'll let you know Monday." Among new plays on Broadway which she had "especially liked" she said were "The Golden Apple," "Pajama Game" and "Teahouse of the August Moon."

When the conference was breaking up, a member of the group paused to shake her hand and wish her "good luck" on opening night. "Thanks very much," she said. "I'll need it."

Russia Vetoes American Try To Shunt Guatemala's Aggression Complaints

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—Russia yesterday vetoed an American-backed proposal to shunt Guatemala's complaint of aggression to the Organization of American States and demanded that the U. N. Security Council act in the case.

It was Moscow's 60th veto in the Security Council. Russia's Delegate Semyon K. Tsarapkin, with Guatemala giving full agreement, stood aside and permitted the Council, meeting in a long and tumultuous Sunday session, to approve a resolution by France calling for an immediate end to the bloodshed in Guatemala.

THE FRENCH proposal, passed unanimously by the 11-member Council, also urged all U. N. members to refrain from assisting any party in the fighting in Guatemala.

Even though the Russian action killed the resolution by Brazil and Colombia to send the matter to the Inter-American Organization, it was certain the matter will be taken up by that body. The Inter-American Organization's Peace Commission will meet today in Washington at 4 p. m. (EST) for a discussion of the Guatemalan fighting.

The Council was started to hear a charge by Guatemalan Ambassador Eduardo Castillo-Arriola that a plane which made a bombing run over Guatemala crashed at Papachula, Mexico, and two Americans were aboard. Mexican authorities said in Mexico City they had no report of the incident. Government flight control authorities there said there had been no landing at Papachula by a damaged plane.

IT WAS THE first time the Security Council has held an extraordinary Sunday session since the Korean War began four years ago. The meeting was marked by a shouted demonstration by a man in the public gallery and by a spirited exchange between Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., United States chief delegate and Council president, and Tsarapkin.

Tsarapkin said the Guatemalan question must be acted on by the Security Council and not be sent to the Inter-American Organization, which he said was dominated by the United States.

LODGE replied with heat that Moscow had designs on the Western Hemisphere and sharply told Tsarapkin to pass the word to Moscow to keep out of the Western Hemisphere.

MR. TRUMAN didn't want "all that commotion" and hospital attendants said he refused an offer of a wheel chair to take him to his room.

The former president was taken to surgery at 12:30 o'clock (CST) Sunday and was returned to his room at 3 a. m. but Dr. Graham said the actual operation took only a little more than an hour.

Mrs. Truman and her sister, Mrs. George Wallace, waited anxiously just outside the surgery room during the operation and remained at the hospital until dawn.

MRS. TRUMAN returned to the hospital at 9 a. m. (10 a. m. EST) after a few hours sleep. She brought a father's day gift for Mr. Truman from daughter Margaret, who is currently with a summer stock show in the Poconos of Pennsylvania.

Members of the immediate family only were permitted to visit Mr. Truman.

Hospital attendants said the former president was able to complain a little yesterday morning, indicating "that he is coming along just beautifully."

DR. GRAHAM said his patient probably would leave the hospital in about 10 days if his recovery followed a typical course.

The usually vigorous ex-president first became ill at the outdoor Starlight Theater Friday night. He had gone there to surprise the audience by playing a brief part in the play "Call Me Madam" based on the career of one of Mr. Truman's favorite persons, Perle Mesta, Washington hostess and former ambassador to Luxembourg.

He sat in the audience during part of the first act but had to leave because of acute pain in his side.

Showdown Battle Is Building Up

By Sam Summerlin
TEGUCIGALPA, HONDURAS (AP)—President Jacob Arbenz Guzman of Guatemala was reported reading a "taxicab army" last night for a counterblow and perhaps a showdown battle against the anti-Communist invaders of his country.

Leaders of the "liberation army" who said their 5,000 men consisted entirely of Guatemalans, declared their three-pronged invasion was well advanced toward the Pan-American Highway near the Salvadorean border.

But Associated Press Correspondent Jack Rutledge in Guatemala said the government had ordered all private automobiles commandeered, and had put guards over all gasoline stations to prevent sales to private owners.

HE SAID the cars were being mobilized to move troops, and that a decisive phase in the battle for Guatemala might be reached in 48 hours.

He quoted Guatemalan army officers as saying no field action had been fought in the three-day old revolution against the Red-backed regime, but that action could not be delayed much longer.

President Arbenz was reported to be in personal charge of defense strategy, and it was speculated that he might have in mind an emulation of the famous "taxicab army" which France rushed up to the Marne in World War One to turn back the Germans from Paris.

The U. S. Embassy in Guatemala also was reported concerned by a rising "anti-American" campaign in the capital. It was reported making plans to evacuate the 1,200 Americans in Guatemala. The embassy described the situation as "very, very serious."

A SPOKESMAN at the "Liberation Army" headquarters here of Col. Carlos Castillo Armas, leader of the Guatemalan resistance movement, said the invaders were moving toward Jutiapa, a town of 5,000 some 45 miles south of Guatemala City and 20 miles north of the El Salvador border.

The rebels also were pointed toward Asuncion Mita, a town of 3,000, 13 miles northeast of Jutiapa.

THE SPOKESMAN said rebel planes were dropping arms in western Guatemala where uprisings against the government have been reported. He said small-scale uprisings had occurred at Tutonilapan, which has a population of 2,500; Retalhuleu, 7,500; and Huehuetenango, 60, which is farther north and close to the Mexican border.

Resistance headquarters claimed Guatemalan soldiers "are deserting to our side" but gave no estimate of the number. Col. Rodolfo Mendoza, former Guatemalan air force chief now aiding the invaders, broadcast an appeal to government fliers to desert.

THE HEADQUARTERS said Guatemala's only railroad, the vital line connecting Puerto Barrios, on the Caribbean, with the capital and San Jose on the Pacific had been cut by the rebels between Puerto Barrios and Guatemala City, near a town called Morales. Some fighting was reported in that sector, although the Guatemalan army has claimed it has made no ground contact yet with the invaders.

Other invading units were reported striking out to cut the rail line farther inland, between Zapaca and Chiquimula, about 65 miles northeast of Guatemala City.

Resistance headquarters said their forces were in Puerto Barrios but conceded that key port was "not official in our hands." The rebels earlier claimed to be holding both Puerto Barrios and San Jose, but those claims had been denied by the government.

The rebels dropped leaflets by plane, decreeing Castillo Armas supreme chief of the national liberation movement and demanding "open rebellion" against "the Communist regime of Jacobo Arbenz Guzman."

THE LEAFLETS listed all anti-Communist organizations both inside and outside Guatemala that are supporting the invaders, including labor, youth and civic groups, university students, and exiles. Seventeen such insurgent groups were named.

Wood To Be New Harmony "Salesman"

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Lt. Gov. Lloyd H. Wood, Republican gubernatorial candidate, pointed yesterday to two developments as indicators that "party harmony" is being restored in Pennsylvania Republican ranks.

Wood resting after the Republican State Committee session which elected Miles Horst as its new state chairman and retiring chairman M. Harvey Taylor "chairman emeritus," said:

"There is no doubt that there is much to be done in the field of restoring harmony. But I propose to go out into the field and be a salesman in talking to these people who are at odds and to try and persuade them that the party comes above all else."

THE DEVELOPMENTS which Wood pointed to as indicators that harmony is being restored consisted of a speech at the state committee session by former State Rep. William McMillen of Indiana County and a statement issued to newsmen by State Sen. John M. Walker of Allegheny County.

McMillen was defeated in the May 18 primary by Atty. Gen. Frank F. Truscott for the GOP lieutenant governor's nomination. Truscott had the backing of the so-called "harmony" leaders of the party.

On Saturday, McMillen introduced a resolution calling for endorsement of the candidates victorious in the primary. And, he added, "I want to state publicly that I'm for this ticket 100 per cent." He has said privately that he is not interested in any state position at the present time.

WALKER, defeated for one of the party's Superior court nominations made a special point on Saturday of stopping at the press table and resting his "unqualified support of the entire ticket from top to bottom."

One other defeated candidate, Internal Affairs Secretary William S. Livengood of Somerset County, was present Saturday. Livengood lost in a bid for a fifth term in the office to Mrs. Gaynelle Dixon of Butler.

It is understood that Wood and Livengood held a conference and it is reported Livengood is satisfied with the results of the conference.

THE TWO-HOUR state committee meeting was perfunctory. In that nothing unexpected developed. Besides the action on Horst and Taylor the committee:

Re-elected Mrs. Sarah Leffler of Lebanon as vice-chairman; Mrs. Isabella Jones of Pittsburgh, secretary; Mrs. Mitchell McCartney of Altoona, Blair County, assistant secretary; and elected Edward W. P. Harris of Philadelphia treasurer to succeed former Philadelphia city chairman William Hamilton Jr.

Wood and Horst said it will be a while, possibly two weeks, before a state finance chairman is selected. Two names have been mentioned for the post, Orus H. Mattheus, former finance chairman, and William Worrlow of Lebanon.

THERE HAVE been reports Mattheus is not interested in the post and that opposition has developed to Worrlow from certain elements in the party. Wood is reported to be seeking another person to take over the post, recently vacated by Philip T. Sharples.

Horst said he plans to resign from his agriculture post as soon as he can "clear my desk." Horst will receive a salary of nearly $20,000 a year as chairman.

Gov. John S. Fine, who received the loudest and longest ovation of any speaker at the meeting, said the Democrats are "digging their own political graves" when they make "false accusations in saying that my administration has accomplished nothing legislatively."

HE CITED 12 instances where he said the Democrats had misstated the case and in four of these cases he added, they have voted will receive a salary of nearly $20,000 a year as chairman.

Dr. Harold S. Pond Jr. will be out of town June 17 through July 4, inclusive.—Adv.

Tamaqua Miner Attempt To Spread Strike Fades Away

TAMAQUA, PA. (AP) — A threatened spread of the Panther Valley mine picketing to the entire anthracite region faded yesterday as only 500 miners turned out for a meeting called by the Tamaqua local.

The meeting was called by the Tamaqua Colliery local of the United Mine Workers in the 7,000-seat stadium to see if other locals outside the valley would support their stand.

Asked if the miners would spread their pickets to operations other than the Lehigh Navigation Coal Co., John Miske, president of the Tamaqua local, replied:

"WE'RE GOING to picket the Panther Valley tomorrow. I don't think we can go elsewhere."

The miners moved, instead, to enlist the aid of President Eisenhower and Gov. John S. Fine in their fight to prevent the permanent dismissal of 1,000 LNC workers.

Plans for a meeting later this week with Fine in Harrisburg were announced by Miske to the cheering, shirt-sleeved miners.

Miske asked on the public address system for representatives of other locals outside the valley to come to the microphone. There was no response although it was known there were some miners from the Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Hazleton and Pottsville areas.

UMW President John L. Lewis made a hurried trip to the region Friday to again order the miners to return to work and work out differences later. At a meeting last night members of the Tamaqua local shouted down union leaders' pleas that they follow Lewis' orders.

Lewis left nearby Hazleton yesterday morning for Washington and was not available for comment.

The open air session was boycotted by all top-level United Mine Workers officials.

THE MEETING failed to attract any sizable delegation from other parts of the anthracite region. It originally was designed to open the way for a general strike of the entire eastern Pennsylvania hard coal region from Scranton in the

Wilson Says U.S. Two Years Ahead On Reds With Weapons

QUANTICO, VA. (AP) — Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said yesterday he still thinks the United States has a two or three year edge on Russia in weapons technology, and "I don't know the gap is narrowing, exactly."

He made that comment to reporters who asked him about a statement at a session of the defense secretaries' conference Saturday by Donald A. Quarles, assistant defense secretary for research. Quarles expressed the view that the technical lead of the United States has "narrowed" in the last year.

In reply to other questions, Wilson repeated his belief that another world war is not inevitable, that "it really isn't the answer" to settling difficulties with the Communists.

"LET'S SAY you do have a third world war," he said. "Then when it's over are you going to have to move in and start rehabilitating the Russians and the Chinese? My God, what a job."

Amplifying his comment about this country's technical lead over Russia, Wilson said he thought that

"We want the governor to intercede with us in making an appointment with President Eisenhower," he told a newsmen.

for them to do it, the so-called "lead time."

He added that, "You can get different men to estimate lead time differently."

Last fall Wilson told a news conference he thought it would be two or three years before the Russians would catch up with the United States in providing planes to wage a sustained nuclear weapons war against this country.

TAMMERT, PA. — The body of William P. Blaisch, 33, Long Island City, N. Y., a camp employee, was found floating in Pond No. 2 on the grounds here at 5:30 a.m. Saturday.

He was drowned, according to Milford State police.

Blaisch, an unmarried veteran who lived at 3231 Greenpoint Ave. in Garden City, had been missing from the camp since June 15. He had been employed as kitchen help, police said.

A CAMP watchman discovered the body. Police said the morning of Blaisch's disappearance, he had been seen around the boats at Pond No. 2. Later, a boat was found drifting loose on the opposite side of the lake, police said.

Deputy Coroner J. H. Crellin, Milford, issued the certificate of accidental death due to drowning. Authorities said Blaisch was clothed when found. There was no official theory on how he went into the water.

CAMP PERSONNEL had searched the surrounding woods and drained the lake without success after Blaisch's disappearance, authorities said.

Surviving are two sisters, both of New York. Burial was yesterday morning at Milford Cemetery.

Diner Owner Complaint Holds Two

MOUNTAINHOME — Two young men from Pittston were jailed on charges of disorderly conduct in the Philip DeLuca diner here at 5 a.m. Saturday.

They were listed by the sheriff's office in Stroudsburg as Robert Lumley and John Murphy, both 19. Justice of the Peace Henry Price, Cresco, said the youths damaged a jukebox at the diner.

Mount Pocono troopers said DeLuca complained, but the pair left before police could summon police. However Pfc. Joseph Mehta intercepted the pair on the highway, and took them back to the diner for identification. Then they were committed to county jail.

The two were released in custody of their parents after the damages were paid for, police said.

Government Finds Bright Spots After Study Of April Employment, Public's Purchases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government found some bright spots when it raked up the spring, economic reports, although unemployment failed to drop as much as it usually does in spring.

In April, the reports said, a decline in factory and mine production which had been in progress since last August was halted, and in May production turned up again.

The public stepped up its buying during the spring, and the construction industry appeared well set on a boom course that could make 1954 a record year for this industry.

NEW ORDERS to manufacturers were also looking up after months of decline. Stocks of up-sold goods, blamed by the administration for a general economic downturn, were not so heavy.

Despite increased unemployment, the Commerce department reported the public had as much spending money this spring as last year, due to unemployment benefits and tax cuts.

Auto sales were better than in many months. Business men continued to plan heavy outlays to expand and modernize their plants.

Those were the bright spots. On the other hand:

WHILE unemployment was down somewhat and employment was up in May, the improvement was not as much as usually takes place in that month.

And defense spending was tilted downward, although possibly not as sharply as had appeared likely for the coming year.

Here are some of the highlights of the economic trend as depicted in government statistics —along with some of the contrasting pictures:

THE SEASONAL rise in farm work lifted rural employment in May from 6,076,000 to 6,822,000, boosting total employment during the month from 60,598,000 to 61,119,000, according to the Census Bureau.

But in nonagricultural lines, employment continued to fall in May, from 54,522,000 to 54,297,000. The continued decline, in progress since last October, was concentrated in factories, mining and transportation, reflecting a downturn in production of durable goods.

Unemployment dropped in May, by Census Bureau estimates, from 3,465,000 to 3,305,000, but this was not as much as the spring business pickup, combined with larger farm employment, usually cuts into the figure.

Seek suffered a small head cut. Damages were about $300 to each car, police said.

Policeman Is Guarded After Threats

PHENIX CITY, ALA. (AP) — A Highway Patrol guard was assigned yesterday to watch the home of a Phenix City policeman who said he had been threatened with death if he didn't "stop talking" about the slaying of the Democratic attorney general nominee, A. L. Patterson.

The officer, E. J. Peoples, appealed to the patrol after he said he fired two shotgun blasts at a mysterious prowler in the front yard of his home several miles outside Phenix City early yesterday.

He may have hit the fleeing intruder with one shot, Peoples said, but Cobb Memorial Hospital reported no one admitted for treatment.

THE POLICEMAN said he spotted the man in his yard shortly after a late model car pulled into his driveway with its lights off and then left in a few minutes.

The car was the same model and color, the officer continued, as one which followed him for several miles Friday night after the anti-vice crusading Patterson had been killed in a drive-by shooting.

Peoples told a reporter and highway patrolmen that the car containing three men followed him to his brother's home near Columbus, Ga., and that a short while later he received a telephone call.

THE UNIDENTIFIED caller told him, the officer related, that he had been "talking too much" at the scene of Patterson's killing, and that he would be slain himself if he didn't keep his mouth shut.

"He told me I'd never live to die from a heart attack if I didn't stop talking," Peoples said. The officer recently suffered a heart attack and has been on leave of absence from the police department since then.

Meanwhile, the clampdown which closed night clubs and stopped the sale of liquor last night continued with tightening pressure as National Guard troops patrolled the city and state, county and city investigators worked day and night groping for a clue to the identity of Patterson's slayer.

THE ONCE carefree Chattahoochee River border city was still off limits to personnel from nearby Ft. Benning, the world's largest infantry training center, and military policemen guarded all entrances into Phenix City from Georgia.

Two Boys Hurt When Judges Stand Collapses During Firemen's Parade Review

JIM THORPE, PA. (AP) — Two boys were injured when an overcrowded judges' stand collapsed during the Four-County Firemen's Parade here Saturday.

Suffering ankle injuries were William Flyte, 12 of Jim Thorpe and Darryl Owens, 11, of Walnutport. Both were taken to Gnadon Hueton Memorial Hospital, Lehighton, by ambulance.

The parade marked the close of the 57th annual Four-County Firemen's Association convention.

It also served as the close of the 100th anniversary celebration of the borough of East Mauch Chunk, now known as Jim Thorpe, Pa.

TAKING TWO and a half hours to pass the judges' stand, the parade consisted of 23 fire companies, 11 auxiliaries, 13 bands and eight drum and bugle corps. There were more than 2,000 persons in the lineup.

Also on display were 20 pieces of firefighting equipment and a number of fire company ambulances. Stroudsburg's Phoenix Fire Co. No. Two truck won second prize for best appearance of fire apparatus in line.

The Townsmen's (Trachville) auxiliary, with 54 women, took second prize for the best-appearing auxiliary. Stroudsburg's fire department had 37 men in line, led by the George N. Kemp Post, American Legion Post 1244 and Eagle Corps, East Stroudsburg.

ACME HOSE CO. No. 1 East Stroudsburg, was also represented. Bumper-to-bumper traffic from Parkerton to Jim Thorpe disrupted preparations for the parade. Traffic held up arrival of musicians and paraders from other regions, but the parade began promptly at 2 p.m.

Refreshments were served at Memorial Park as the parade disbanded. Open house was observed all day at the Fairview Fire Co., host in Jim Thorpe and Lehigh Fire Co. in Lehighton. Lehigh had the largest number—138—of men in line.

The attractive tree-lined streets of the convention town helped break up effects of intense heat. There were no casualties in the line of march.

When unexpected company comes, and you want a quick salad to add to your menu, open a can of snap beans and marinate them in French dressing. Serve the beans on salad greens with some of the dressing in which they were marinated. Strips of canned pimiento make a pretty garnish for this salad.

Subtle Censorship

Today hearings will start in the House in Washington on the Bryson bill intended to prohibit advertising of alcoholic beverages in all media transported in interstate commerce. The effect of this in brief would be that while legal to sell liquor the fact of its being available should not be publicly advertised in newspapers, on the radio and television or any media which crosses state lines.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association takes the position it should always be legal to advertise anything that may be legally sold. The New York Herald Tribune describes the bill as an "absurdity which needs to be roundly defeated." To that and the position of the ANPA all newspapers subscribe, at the same time holding that the bill is inexcusable, fully intended censorship.

Many newspapers now regulate their advertising of alcoholic beverages. Some limit the volume or types, others refuse entirely to allow liquor advertisements in their columns. That is entirely within the province of a newspaper.

The bill would bring back some of the evils of the prohibition period. In addition to penalizing manufacturers and distributors of alcoholic beverages it would add to the burden of newspapers by forcing the elimination, through makeovers, of liquor advertisements from papers transported in interstate commerce. There appears to be no general or widespread demand for such legislation and it is to be hoped the House committee before which hearings on the bill are scheduled will promptly shelve or defeat it.

New York's 'New Look'

The man who has been a political powerhouse in neighboring New York State for nearly a quarter of a century is reported ready to call it a day for the peace and quiet and higher income of private life.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's political power transcends the New York state lines. Twice he was the Republican Party's presidential candidate, and two years ago he was a major force in bringing about the nomination of President Eisenhower.

Three straight times he has been elected as New York's governor, and every political indication is that he could breeze into a fourth term next year if he chose to run.

Dewey himself hasn't spoken for the record, but the authoritative New York Times says his decision not to run is "definite and irrevocable."

The long-time political power, who skyrocketed to prominence as a federal prosecutor, has been such a dominant figure on the New York election scene, that his name and the government of our nation's largest state have become almost synonymous.

Big New York state's big politics is going to have a "new look."

Eisenhower And 1956

President Eisenhower has told a press conference that he has not given any thought about running for re-election in 1956. He is, he said, much too busy with the major problems of the country and the world.

His reply came in answer to a question regarding remarks of Sherman Adams, presidential assistant, that Mr. Eisenhower might well decide not to run again if the Democrats win control of Congress next fall.

It is certainly too early to speculate on whether the President will or will not decide to enter the presidential race, for many things can happen—at home and abroad—to make him change his mind, if indeed, he has made it up at all.

Of one thing we feel certain: Regardless of what happens in the fall elections, the American people still will judge the man in the White House on his own personal record. And to date the President's personal record can stand the closest kind of scrutiny.

—by H. I. Phillips

WHAT! NO ENCORE! Back to the "How to Bake a Cake." ...

Back to the Westerns and old "Two Gun!"

The Washington TV Show is done!

Back to the style shows with babes galore!

To Maggi and Nancy and Garry Moore!

To wild whodunits and screams and crime! ...

Washington's done with the TV time!

A cheer for cooking instructions all ...

To beauty talks and the cry, "Play ball!" ...

Hooley for the quizzes and jack-pots, too! ...

Those Washington players at last are through!

Cry of the teenagers as they watched the Pentagon-McCarthy proceedings: "And they call us CRAZY MIXED-UP KIDS!" ...

Frank Carr, so long silent, was easily the most appealing witness in the hearings and the only one with a sense of humor ...

He got the big laughs of the sessions when Senator Dirksen, drawing a parallel with the Schine case, asked, "While you have only known Counsel St. Claire 32 days, wouldn't you say he might qualify for an Army commission?" and got the reply, "I'd say so on the basis of today's work alone." ...

And he got another when McChie-lan asked, "Don't you think the Democrats got smeared down here, too?" replied, "I'd say that anybody who comes to Washington has a good chance." ...

Sure sign of dirty work at the crossroads comes when a Senator begins his quiz with "Now in ALL FAIRNESS." ...

If the Potomac TV show is ever released as a movie, it will kill the old-time

Chaplin comedies ... Senator Dirksen, it seems to us, brought out a highly interesting point when he asked how can a government which offers a cash award to any citizen who will squeal on another in tax matters get so outraged over whether a Senate Committee can accept information on treason? ...

Nothing in the much-discussed "secret document" possessed by Joe McCarthy contained anything that could have hurt the security of the country ...

Our belief, with the Washington TV hearings over is that the general public got a pretty terrible impression of Senators in action and retains the feeling that, with few exceptions, they seemed a little on the dim-wit side and gaseous beyond the call of duty ...

The TV audience would, in our opinion, hand down the following verdicts: (1) any competent group of citizens could have brought out in one week all that the Senators brought out in almost two months; (2) Baby Snooks never asked sillier questions than some of those asked by Army counsel; (3) Senator Symington never succeeded in making it clear why he should sit as a judge in a case involving another Senator against whom he had expressed extreme disapproval, if not contempt; (4) nothing was funnier during the entire show than Counsel Welch asking why a committee trying to fight the tough Commie threat didn't just go to the Pentagon, and cry to the first receptionist, "I've got hot dogs on subversives?" (5) Senator Mundt got gifts of a pipe and cigars but what he needs more than anything else, judging from his idea of a 5-minute recess, is a good WATCH.

This column's belief is that the McCarthy side won by a country mile and that John Q. Citizen would sum it up in these words: "Joe lacks polish, pulls boners and is no matinee idol, but the Commies will never get driven out by kid-glove boys. If I was in Indian country with scalping parties in the brush, I'd rather have Joe on watch outside my tent than Joe Welch, Attorney St. Claire or Bob Stevens."

GOLDEN SPIKE

Robert S. Allen Reports

Brownell Has Lost Fight To Legalize Wiretapping

Washington—Attorney General Herbert Brownell has lost his long fight to legalize wiretapping evidence.

There is no chance now of the legislation's getting through the Senate. Even if it passed the Judiciary Committee, where a powerful bipartisan bloc has stalled the measure for months, any attempt to bring it to a Senate vote would immediately run head on into a bitter filibuster.

At this late stage of the session, that means this for the bill.

With the legislative calendar jammed with urgent budget and other top priority measures pressing for enactment before adjournment, a threat to filibuster against a controversial proposal, such as Brownell's, is equivalent to killing it. The harassed floor leaders shuffle the bill to the bottom of the list and that's the end of it.

Four tough opponents have already served notice they will filibuster on the wiretapping issue. They are Senators Wayne Morse (Ind., Ore.), Harley Kilgore (D., W. Va.), Olin Johnston (D., S.C.) and Thomas Hennings (D., Mo.).

It's also highly probable they would get a lot of help from Senator William Langer (R., N.D.), Judiciary Committee chairman, who is also hostile to the legislation.

This bleak backstage situation is still further shadowed by two other factors:

(1) Even if the measure can be forced out of the Judiciary Committee, in one way or another, there is no likelihood it would be in the form demanded by Brownell. He insists that power to authorize wiretapping be vested solely in the Justice Department.

The House, by a big vote several months ago, turned that down and gave it to the courts.

The Senate is certain to do the same. (2) If the legislation is shelved in the Senate, that kills it for good. The close of the session will conclude this 82nd Congress, and all measures left on the calendar die with it. Brownell, to revive his proposal, would have to start all over again from scratch in the new Congress that convenes next January.

Note: William J. Mellin, who was described to the Judiciary Committee as the "dean of wiretappers," told the lawmakers, "I have checked the telephones of at least two Presidents of the United States and a number of cabinet members. I have tapped in excess of 60,000 wires in my 40 years' experience as a wiretapper."

Big Business—Another leading authority started the Committee with his disclosures regarding the extent to which wiretapping is used outside the government.

He is Raymond Shindler, N. Y., widely-known private detective.

"There are hundreds of detective agencies in the country," said Shindler in reply to a question, "and from my experience over a period of many years I know that wiretapping is very general among them. I also know that lawyers, and 90 per cent of my clients are attorneys, do a lot of wiretapping. They tell me about these cases. Wiretapping is quite general throughout the country."

"Do you do any wiretapping?" asked Thomas Collins, counsel for the Committee.

"We get dozens of requests every year," said Shindler, "and we turn them down flat. We have strict standards that we follow when we do wiretapping."

"What are they?"

"The only circumstances under which we even consider doing it," explained Shindler, "is where an individual has been threatened with blackmail or something else over the phone. There is only one way of running down a thing like that and getting the necessary evidence and that is tapping his phone, with his permission, of course."

"That is," said Collins, "the investigator taps the client's phone with his knowledge. No effort is made to put on an illegal tap?"

"It is both illegal and unethical to tap a phone without an individual's knowledge," replied Shindler. "Anyone caught doing it can be sent to prison."

Worthwhile Probe — Amid all the uproar over sensational and violent congressional investigations, one is going on right now that is a graphic demonstration that probes can be both orderly and useful.

Perhaps because this inquiry is so devious, virtually nothing has been heard about it. But that's to the credit of everyone connected with it.

This distinguished investigation is being made by a special group of the House Government-Operations Committee—the opposite number of the committee headed by Senator Joe McCarthy (R., Wis.).

Chairman of the House Subcommittee is Representative R. Walter Richman (R., N. Y.).

The purpose of this inquiry is to look into the relations between the military and the civilian scientists engaged in defense research projects.

Charles Fellowes, of Providence, R. I., has a friend who fancies himself a raconteur but, unfortunately, stumbles over the endings of the stories he begins so bravely. His wife always consoles him with, "Never mind, my love. That was the funniest sixty percent of a story I ever heard!"

The lecture racket, an English teacher at a small Vermont college discovered, isn't all it's cracked up to be. He was hired for $50 to talk on Shakespeare before a ladies' club, but just a day before the date scheduled, received a wire cancelling the engagement. "Have decided," the club's secretary added, "to give a baked bean dinner instead."

George Allen, a White House wit, recalls a day when he settled a $20,000 lawsuit for $35. "Your Honor," he told the judge, "I'm just in no mood to quibble."

The glass filaments drawn to make fiberglass are so fine that, 97 miles of filaments are drawn from a single glass sphere the size of a marble.

George Sokolsky Says...

Employer Investigations Of Employees Has Been Going On For A Long Time;

Some time ago my good friend, Carl W. Ackerman, Dean of the Faculty of Journalism of Columbia University, said:

"Today the vast majority of teachers in all fields of instruction have learned that promotion and security depend upon conformity to the prevailing community or national concept of devotion 'to the public welfare.'"

Why should teachers feel that they are forced to conform? And what are they being forced to conform to? Is any man required to conform to a particular religious group to teach in our public schools? Is anyone required to belong to a political party? Must he accept a particular philosophy of life?

As one analyzes the problem, the only position that involves a teacher or anyone else in difficulties at the present time is membership in the Communist Party or support for the Communist Party or in favor of espionage or defense of those who engage in espionage.

What has that to do with conformity? The country is in a state of war with the Soviet Union and is struggling against this particular power not only in the United States but in every country in which we have an interest. Therefore there is an inevitable deep concern over the extent of the infiltration of subversion and espionage in this country. Any other course would be suicidal.

On the other hand, no Communist publication has been suppressed. The "Daily Worker" is published every day. A number of monthly magazines are issued by this Party. Certainly these publications do not conform to a pattern. Books are published on all sides of these questions.

Dean Ackerman also made this point:

"Before or after graduation a student must look for a job. He knows all employers now 'investigate' before hiring. He knows that an 'A' record is no longer a sufficient recommendation, not a degree. Employers ask searching questions, not about ability, resourcefulness, reliability, industry and integrity, as in the past, but also about the political and social attitudes of the applicant."

I have lived nearly as long as Dean Ackerman and I cannot recall when his description was not true. Men used to be hired on what was called "character." Perhaps that is a neolithic term, but by it was meant "a good name," "a good reputation." Receiving the mark of "A" does not even imply that a person has a good character. It may mean that he has a photographic memory.

"Naturally, one investigates his staff. I recall when it used to be customary to ask for a letter from a priest or pastor or rabbi. I know employers, particularly of secretarial help, who want something like that. My office is at home and I would not employ anyone, even with a Phi Beta Kappa Key whom I would not care to introduce to wife and children. An "A" would not prove that I could do that. An employer who has a defense contract does not want to employ anyone who would get him or his firm into trouble. Quite apart from patriotism, it is a nuisance to have to go through investigations and explanations. It is more practical to have a check made in advance.

Dean Ackerman objects to various departments of government checking on persons. I have been investigated by experts, probably since the day I was born. Every once in a while, I hear about something like that. So far as I am concerned, it gives me no bother. Nearly every year, the Internal Revenue Bureau goes over my private affairs with a fine comb to discover what I receive and spend and pay to the Government. That is as much a check on me currently as some agency of government asking me whether I knew Emma Goldman or Leon Trotsky or Mao Tse-tung.

As a matter of fact, I sometimes envy those geniuses who manage to get paid in cash and do not have to write down every item of earning and expenditure. It is even becoming difficult to sin with all the scrutiny that is going on. But there it is and we take it in our stride and if a fellow's nose is fairly clean, he survives even a field check. Nobody who has no record to hide need worry about his "character."

As a matter of fact, a little investigating even helps to confound his enemies.

To be or to become anything that his ability and his character enable him to be or to become.

A barber in our town complained to me that in our whole community of more than 12,000 people he saw only three flags displayed on Decoration Day. He watched the parade and noticed that many of the marchers regarded the whole thing as a joke or a chore.

He himself is the son of Italian immigrants. His father was a laborer. He, the son, is now the owner of the town's largest barbershop. He is a member of many civic clubs and holds his head high in any assembly. One of his sons was killed in the war. His other son is now a famous physician. His daughter is married to a successful engineer.

Could Italy have done that for him? Could a man have had that sort of an opportunity in France, in Russia, in Germany, in China? I get thoroughly sick of all the grumbling and the griping and the fights and squabbles between management and labor, between class and class.

Isn't we all sons or descendants of immigrants? Has not the whole world come to these shores for freedom and opportunity?

And have these shores disappointed us? Look around you and see. Then get down on your knees and thank the Lord for letting you be an AMERICAN!

Dr. Wakeman asked the reporter to step over to his desk. He took out a faded piece of paper and handed it to the newsmen.

"This is it," he said as he unrolled it. It was his United States citizenship paper.

Dr. Wakeman, the writer tells, came to this country 44 years ago from a little Ukrainian village, with very little money and not a word of English. His one desire was to escape from the prosecution and to get the education denied to him because he was a Jew.

Since then he has become one of the most famous scientists in the world. Honors have literally been heaped upon him. He has all sorts of honorary degrees, and could have made a fortune if he had employed his knowledge and his genius commercially.

But none of the honors can compare, in his esteem, with the honor of being an American citizen.

His autobiography, which is going to appear soon, is dedicated to his grandchildren for whom he and his wife have long labored to create a better world "perhaps somewhat freer from prejudices, freer from suffering, than they themselves have found it."

Sometimes I wonder why it is that native Americans take their American citizenship so much for granted and appreciate it so little.

Is it perhaps, because to be born an American is to be an immigrant by accident while the immigrant becomes a citizen by choice?

We, who have spent many years, or perhaps our entire youth in Europe, know what it is to be an American. Every day we thank our Maker for having given us the opportunity to live in a land that is free, where every man and every woman and every child has the opportunity to be or to become anything that his ability and his character enable him to be or to become.

A barber in our town complained to me that in our whole community of more than 12,000 people he saw only three flags displayed on Decoration Day. He watched the parade and noticed that many of the marchers regarded the whole thing as a joke or a chore.

He himself is the son of Italian immigrants. His father was a laborer. He, the son, is now the owner of the town's largest barbershop. He is a member of many civic clubs and holds his head high in any assembly. One of his sons was killed in the war. His other son is now a famous physician. transformations from oblivion to fame, the swift flight to the heights, the discovery of treasures—are full of wonders. For the shaping of success or failure is frequently subtle and irresistible. And it is always fascinating to detect the virtues and vagaries resulting in renown. The burst of imaginative energy that makes possible boundless prospects. This mysterious process is both formidable and delicate. It requires diligence and intelligence, skill and good fortune. Clearly, stardust is often more magical than Aladdin's Lamp.

Just Between Us

—By Bobby Westbrook

Another June weekend when everything else paled before the radiance of the brides. Even the color and band music of the parade couldn't compete with muted flower colors and Lehengren.

If ever you saw a picture book wedding it was Joan Huffman's. For one thing, both Joan and her tall, blond jet pilot looked like an illustration from Brides, and for another the guests were mighty decorative, too, many of them home from college and their careers for the occasion.

And there were so many little details: the reception rooms so cool in the heat of the day—like baked Alaska is to the taste; the little cool frogs in the colorful salad, made of green-dyed eggs with slits for a mouth and a red pepper tongue and cloves for eyes; the perfection of the roses on the wedding cake, so perfect that you had to touch them to tell which were real and which were icing.

The graceful wrought iron balcony made such a perfect setting for Joan to throw her bouquet—and the bridegroom his garter. Oh, it was a wedding to remember—but aren't they all?

The only thing that banished the sound of wedding bells over the weekend was the news from the Southland that our Boy and Girl Scouts are now in St. Augustine, camping overlooking the ocean, and due to come home from there by way of the Smokies.

Personal Charm Miss Truman's Great Asset

Concert Debut In Detroit Was Case In Point

IN MARCH, 1947, a blond-haired, green-eyed young lady of 23 years stepped onstage before the members of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

She had an easy, broad smile and—despite definite nervous tension—a great deal of personal charm and professional poise.

The orchestra and the singer passed through the melodious, untasting themes of several evergreen tunes, including "The Last Rose of Summer" and "Cielito Lindo."

When the concert was over and the last rounds of applause had died, Margaret Truman had made her professional debut as a concert singer. Although she could not then be called a threat to the reigning divas of the day, it had been an auspicious occasion.

MOST OF THE critics covering the performance gave her an even break between bouquets and brickbats; none of them denied she showed promise.

Some members of the audience who had hoped to see the daughter of a U. S. President do a professional prafall were disappointed. Miss Truman's voice was small, the critics agreed, but the charm and poise that surrounded it were enormous.

From Detroit, Margaret went on a tour of the nation. In city after city the report was the same—theaters and concert halls were filled to the four walls. Critical reception, also, remained the same: kindly and constructive; often non-committal.

A notable exception to this critical kindness occurred in Washington where Paul Hume, music reviewer for the Post who said "Miss Truman cannot sing very well." This prompted a burst of paternal indulgence on the President's part which made headlines all across the nation.

IN A BLUNTNESS equal to, if not greater than, Hume's, Truman suggested that the next time he saw the reviewer, he would be happy to sock him in the nose.

After a time, the interval died down; Hume's nose remained un-plastered and Margaret continued singing. In 1948 she dropped her concert schedule and "went on the road" to help her father campaign. He was elected in November and Margaret returned to her previous pursuit of a career.

During the early portion of her preparation for a singing career, Margaret's training was entrusted to Mrs. Thomas J. Strickler, a fellow Missourian. Following the 1948 election—in which her father scored a surprising (to the pollsters) upset—Margaret began getting her coaching from another, much more famous teacher.

The teacher was Helen Traubel, a leading lyric soprano in the Metropolitan Opera fold in New York. Miss Traubel, who is also a native of Missouri, contributed her services voluntarily for more than a year.

IN THE final analysis, the most important single factor in the making of Margaret Truman, independent celebrity from Independence, may have occurred far from the spacious, echoing acoustics of assorted concert halls.

During 1948 and the year following, Margaret entered a new field. She became—under the auspices of the National Broadcasting Company—one of a number of "guest artists" scheduled to appear in the year's broadcasting course.

ON HER FIRST FEW "guest" appearances, Margaret earned from two to three thousand each. Before anyone quite knew what was happening, the public was asking for more.

By 1951 her infrequent work on such programs as the Fred Allen show and Tallulah Bankhead's "The Big Show" had grown into a steady, constantly-growing employment field. In early 1951 she was signed to a contract by NBC which paid her nearly $35,000 for radio and TV shows during the television season.

Margaret's singing voice had little to do with her new-found success in television circles. TV—and before it, radio—had discovered a quality in her which had been readily apparent to persons who had known her before and had been glimpsed from afar by the thousands of concertgoers on tour. The quality was naturalness.

THE TELEVISION contract was renewed in 1952 and again in 1953. She is still under agreement with NBC and RCA Victor. This year Margaret's acting capacities encouraged the network to cast her in a leading role in a straight dramatic play.

In none of her appearances on the networks was Margaret cast as the "star of the show," with the exception of the straight play seen this year. She was cast, generally, in the role of an added attraction. It was a role which she fulfilled with unpretentious stability.

By 1953 another—and quite unavoidable—stumbling block had been removed from Margaret's road to an independent career. For the first time since her official debut, her father was no longer occupying the nation's chief household.

FOR THOSE PERSONS who had mumbled about "a president's daughter" in the past there was a momentary rumbling of "Well it's all over for Margaret." But it wasn't.

If anything the effect of Harry Truman's retirement from public eminence cut loose the last second-hand apron strings. Margaret was more nearly a free agent than at any other time in her life.

The return of the Trumans to Independence had another effect. It gave Margaret a greater chance to enjoy privacy in her personal affairs.

SOMEWHAT EARLIER, when Margaret played tennis with an unidentified young Naval officer, the gossip columnists saw a marriage in the offing in no time.

For the most part Margaret's dates have been with unspectacular young men whose interests were basically her own. They held good, solid jobs with the government, with law firms or with advertising agencies and there wasn't a "serious" romance in the lot.

In 1951, Miss Truman told a Time magazine researcher that her "real romance" was music.

MONDAY NIGHT Margaret's "romance" with the legitimate theater will pass from the realm of private courtship into public prophecy. Whether the romance develops into a full-time thing will depend largely on two unpredictable elements.

One of these is the critics—an anomalous, phlegmatic lot whose enthusiasm or despair is often credited with casting a blight on the lives of actors.

The second—and infinitely more important—is an equally patternless and many-headed monster with more personalities than a Turkish harem in full clash. It's called the audience. Whatever criticism it may give is measured in terms of dollars and cents.

Where the critic speaks largely in the measured tones of his trade, the audience, one might say, converses in the universal language.

WHATEVER THE outcome of her Monday night debut may be, the girl from Independence probably will lose none of the faith which has carried her from the "Henhouse Hicks" to a measure of national fame.

For the stagestruck girl from N. Delaware St., Independence there was a half-finished dream. It was a dream populated by herself on a stage—but not necessarily the center of the stage.

For a good many years the dream had flourished in obscurity where only she and a few select friends (and her family) could watch it grow. Once out in the public sun it has sprouted its share of branches. Like all dreams of fame it has a 50-50 chance. It depends a good deal on the dreamer.

THE STROUDSBURG High School Class of 1944 held a ten-year reunion at the Fernwood on Saturday night. Seventy-four class members attended the dinner.

Lester Katz welcomed the group and John Dengler did a musical specialty. A review of the "class activities in high school" was read by Elmer Berger. Betty Lightner and Daniel Warner read an item about each of the 104 Class Members.

Gifts were presented to George Stone, Dallas, Texas for "male member coming the greatest distance"; Jean Lee Berger, Reading, Mass. "female member coment made a guess as to the total gained or lost for the class. Mrs. Grace Wolbert won the award for guessing 1050 pounds gained. The actual gain was 1035 pounds.

RED AND WHITE roses were used for a centerpiece on each table. These were arranged by Ruth Heller, Henrietta Reaser and Josephine Doty.

A name tag made in the form of a graduation cap was given to each person as they arrived. These were done by Helen Bush and Delores Sobinsky. Some pictures of the absent members and families were displayed which everyone enjoyed.

Convicts Kill One, Hold Eight Visitors In Jail But Fail To Break Free

LANSING, KAN., June 20.—Six long-term convicts, wielding three crudely-fashioned, home-made pistols and several knives, killed a guard and briefly held eight terrified prison visitors as hostages in an unsuccessful attempt to escape from the Kansas State Prison yesterday.

Two convicts and one of the hostages were wounded, none critically, in the confused exchange of fire that followed the prisoners' attempt to force an escape through the administration building.

Warden Charles Edmondson said the convicts, all serving long terms, waited in the prison yard outside the building until the visitors left the visitors' room.

THEY THEN pounced on the group, which included an 11-year-old boy and a 2-year-old girl, and forced them back towards the building at gun point.

Holding their captives before them, the prisoners entered the building through a storm door and got into a vestibule protected by a double gate, Edmondson said.

There they ordered gatekeeper Andy Hollinshead to open the gate and began shooting when he refused.

"WOMEN started screaming and everything was confusion," Charles Baker, special assistant to the Jackson County Kansas City prosecutor, who was among the hostages, said.

First Kenaga, a guard supervisor and a veteran of 25 years on the prison force, was fatally wounded.

Warden Edmondson rushed to the vestibule and the convicts took several shots at him when he, too, refused to open the gates.

THE WARDEN returned with guard reinforcements through a corridor leading to the gates and ordered the convicts to surrender.

RILEY

Sports Editor

If golf professionals the world over are forced to change their tactics of teaching and completely revolutionize the game, they can blame a gentleman by the name of Ed Furgol, the courageous individual from Clayton, Missouri, who won the famed National Open tournament at Springfield, N.J. on Saturday. Ed is the man with the twisted and short left arm that devised a golf swing so good that it defeated the 162 best golfers in the world here at treacherous Baltusrol Country Club.

In the past professionals have preached, writers have written, and fans have read that the left side of a person's body holds the key to his golfing success. Would-be players have been urged to keep their left arm straight, play the ball in relation to their left heel, hold and move their left side thus-and-so. But now all that has been changed, as Furgol brings home to every duffer in the business by putting special emphasis on the right side.

Furgol was forced by misfortune to develop a special swing, one that depends on his right side almost entirely. Ed suffered a fall from a piece of playground apparatus at the age of 12 and suffered a shattered left elbow. The damaged bones failed to knit properly and even surgery couldn't clear up the miseries that were destined to make Furgol's left arm from six to 10 inches shorter than his right. At one time it was feared that Ed might have to have the damaged arm amputated, but he heeded his doctor's advice and saved the limb by exercising it properly and often.

It was a painful trail from his vegetable farm home near Utica, N.Y. to the Open championship, one strewn with pain and heart breaks. But Ed did perfect an unorthodox swing and in doing so developed into one of the longest hitters in the game, although it sounds quite impossible under the circumstances. Ed's win was a story book affair and certainly one of the most popular in the colorful history of the Open. It should be worth at least $100,000 to the guy that refused to accept defeat and turned a withered arm into an instrument of victory instead of hopeless reversal.

Although Furgol's win was the greatest thing to happen in the Open from a national standpoint, from a local angle the second round play of Shawnee's Al Nelson was the real heart-tugging victory of the tournament. Al had skied to an 87 on opening day and was certainly out of the title picture. Nelson felt lower than the bottom of the ocean after the first round, but still had the unbelievable courage to come back and shoot a blistering 73 on the same course in the second round, out-scoring such stars as Sam Snead and Billy Joe Patton on the second day.

Nelson passed over the feat by saying that he was just hitting the ball right for the first time in the tournament. But it took something for a youngster to go through the second round when established pros with even less of an opening round score were picking up and moving into the role of spectators. Al went through with the second round and admitted that it was the finest single round of golf he ever shot. It was a truly courageous demonstration.

With an opportunity to take bows all over the place, Nelson graciously gave all credit to Harry Obitz, head pro at Shawnee, who witnessed the second round play as a spectator. Al pointed out that it was Harry who got his swing back in the groove, although the latter maintains he had nothing to do with the recovery. Other members of the Shawnee staff were also credited with some pretty good pep talks. Al also pointed out that he practiced more with his long irons prior to the second round, while prior to opening day he concentrated on the short irons, namely the seven, eight and nine, believing these were the clubs needed to shoot a good score. Although he was eliminated after two rounds, Nelson won a host of friends.

Pocono Lake Nips Saylorsburg To Gain Top Spot

Moyer Suffers First Mound Defeat, 3-1

Pocono Pines — Pocono Lake took over undisputed control of first place in the Pocono Mountains Baseball League yesterday with a thrilling 3-1 decision over Saylorsburg, here on the Tobyhanna Township High school field.

The loss was the first suffered by Ralph "Peanuts" Moyer, Saylorsburg mound star who had run up four straight favorable verdicts. Moyer and George Wacke hooked up in a real old fashioned mound duel, with the latter finishing on the long end of the count but only after a terrific struggle.

Two Runs
Pocono Lake broke a scoreless deadlock with two runs in the fifth frame and then came back to add an insurance marker in the seventh.

Saylorsburg tried desperately to get a winning rally underway in the eighth, but the best the home team could do was plate a single run.

Wacke held Saylorsburg to five hits, while Pocono Lake accounted for twice that many off Moyer. All hits were limited to singles.

The victory gives Pocono Lake a one-game lead over Reiders, Kunkelton and Ansonink, all tied for second place.

The presence of Erdelatz will mark the first visit to the clinic for the Navy grid mentor, while Gillman, Evashevski and Carnevale all made great hits with student coaches in previous visits to the clinic held each year on Normal Hill.

Jim Crowley, one of the famous Four Horsemen of Notre Dame and later a successful college football coach, is listed as the main speaker at the Wednesday night banquet to be held at the Penn-Stroud Hotel. Crowley completed his coaching career at Fordham and is now a television executive in Scranton.

Today's program is made up of a registration period from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m. Gillman will lecture from 10:15 to 12:15 p. m., at which time the clinic will adjourn for lunch. Gillman will return from 1 to 3 p. m. and Carnevale will take over from 3 to 5 p. m.

Chisox Split With Yankees

Chicago (3) — The New York Yankees and the Chicago White Sox battled to a standoff in a doubleheader yesterday, the Yankees socking four homers and 16 other assorted blows for a 16-6 victory in the opener, and the Sox taking the second game 7-3 as Bob Keegan turned a seven-hitter into his 10th victory of the season.

Lose Ground
Both clubs thus lost ground in the American League race to the Cleveland Indians, who were beating Boston twice. The second-place Sox dropped four games behind and the Yankees five.

Long Blows
Al Baehman, Kresge, Arnst and Canfield hit home runs during the course of the battle.

Tobyhanna Blanks Moscow

Tobyhanna — Tobyhanna rolled to its second straight victory in the Pocono Mountains Association yesterday by turning in a 5-0 victory here on the Coolbaugh High field. Jack Dunning hurled a neat three-hitter against Moscow and retired 14 batters via the strike-out route while on the way to victory.

Homer
Dunning also slashed a home run and single to lead the winning club at the plate.

Tannersville Falls Before West End, 4-2

Gilbert West End A. C. accounted for its second victory of the current Pocono Mountains Baseball League season yesterday by turning in a 4-2 nod over Tannersville. The contest was held here on the winning club's home grounds.

Bob "Rob" Burkett defeated Jim "Red" Makosky in a well pitched contest, the former allowing five safeties and the latter only three. Four Tannersville errors proved fatal to the visiting club.

Extra Bases
Lex "Bruno" Doll doubled off Bob Burkett in the ninth and Dick Burkett tripled off Makosky in the fourth for the only extra base blows of the contest.

Tannersville's only two runs came in the sixth.

No member of either team was able to account for more than one safety.

Tannersville reportedly played the game under protest.

Tatamy Crushes Pocono A.C. In Blue Mountain League Tilt

Tatamy — Pocono A. C. absorbed a 14-5 lacing at the hands of Tatamy in a Blue Mountain League baseball game played here yesterday, even though the Monroe County contingent held a 15-4 edge in the hit department.

Both clubs picked up single runners in the first frame, but Tatamy jumped on Bill "Bump" Metzger for two more runs in the second, four in the third and another singleton in the fourth.

Relief
Metzger was chased to the showers in the sixth when Tatamy came up with another four-run outburst. Bill Sommers took over the mound duties at this point and gave up two more runs in the eighth.

The delicate scent and delightful aroma of dried spiced rose petals is something none of us will ever forget. Making a rose jar is simple. All you need is some ordinary table salt, a big batch of rose petals and a little toilet water. Rather than give all the directions in this limited space, The Green Thumb wants to offer his helpful bulletin, "How to Make a Rose Jar," which gives you all the directions necessary. Friends, if you grow roses, then you'll want to make yourself an old-fashioned, sweet-smelling rose jar to fill your house with the aroma of roses. Be sure to send in a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to The Green Thumb, Naples, N. Y., please. Do not send me postal cards, or loose clippings. We need a self-addressed, stamped envelope before we can send any of our bulletins. Be sure your return address is complete. Never use "Local" or "City," but write it out in full. RHUBARB NOTES: Several of friends are having trouble with their rhubarb. A new complaint is: "What makes the stalks rot, or wilt and die?" Rhubarb rot is known as crown rot, or phytophthora rot. First you get sunken spots at the base of the leaf stalks and then rotting and wilting soon set in, progressing from stalk to stalk, killing the plant. EVERGREEN TIPS: Folks, take a look at your evergreens. Are the bottom branches brown or black? That means dogs have been at work. Dogs can kill an evergreen or make it look mighty unsightly. Try spraying nicotine sulfate, 1 teaspoonful to 2 qts. of water, on your evergreens. Or, you can use the repellent rope, treated with materials disagreeable to dogs, deer, rabbits, etc. The rope is cut in pieces and placed around the evergreen, or in flower beds or borders, or any place where dogs frequently visit.	Awnings &amp; Canopies Canvas and Aluminum Also Garden Furniture Delivery Service FREE ESTIMATES Seals Furniture Shop 430 S. ## Soviet Press Has Made It Clear Guatemala Government Has Full Support Of The Kremlin

By Tom Whitney
AP Foreign Staff

THE SOVIET press has made clear in recent days that the left government of President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman in Guatemala has the full moral support of the Kremlin.

The Red propaganda version is that those who are opposed to Arbenz are all agents of "American imperialism," while those who support him are simply trying to save their country from rack and ruin at the hands of the United Fruit Co. and John Foster Dulles, whom the Russians describe as one of the biggest stockholders in this corporation.

For weeks Pravda and other Soviet papers have been predicting that the United States would try to organize a rebellion against Arbenz and overthrow his regime.

capital have not been plying up the Guatemalan crisis day after day recently, but they have published several important editorials—all condemning the United States and all praising the Guatemalan government.

In writing about Guatemala all the major Soviet papers have neglected totally to mention one very important fact—the arms shipment to Guatemala from Iron Curtain countries which set off the recent developments.

Pravda, the Literary Gazette, Komsomol Pravda and other major Moscow organs have all, on the other hand, described in considerable detail the hasty U. S. arms shipments to Guatemala's neighbors after the 10-million-dollar lot of Red weapons arrived in Guatemala. The American aid to Honduras and Nicaragua was pictured in Soviet newspapers as aggression against Guatemala without any justification.

"THE EXAMPLE of Guatemala," Pravda said in an important editorial, "is inspiring other Latin-American countries."

"Along with plots inside the country, the ruling circles of the United States are preparing direct intervention in Guatemala," Pravda declared.

"Under the false flag of 'anti-communism' the imperialists of the United States hope to keep eternally their colonial system in Latin America. They are so eager to deal with Guatemala because it has become the banner of the peoples of Latin America in their struggle for independence."

The patriots of Latin America know that intervention in Guatemala would make easier for the American imperialists the crushing of the national-liberation movement in all Latin-American countries."

Kids Have It Made Again For Odd Happenings With Big Assist From The Birds

By Charles Mercer

NEW YORK (AP)—As another school year drew to a close last week kids flew the classrooms—and an amazing array of birds flew into trouble.

In San Francisco somebody who wanted the eighth-grade pupils of an elementary school to have a pleasant vacation stole all report cards, achievement records and progress reports of the class.

The Pittsburgh school superintendent made it a short story for four high school boys who were shorts to school in violation of the rule. Three days before school was out he suspended the four.

IN NORMAN, Okla., a boy whose high school career was colorful because of his interest in motor scooter races, sent a personal invitation to the police department to attend his graduation. In his invitation he said, "For your information, I made it."

But birds flew into odder situations than kids did. Especially parakeets.

In Newport, Ky., a pet parakeet flew into a hole in the wall of the local Elks Club and it cost the BPOE $200 to tear down the wall to get him out.

IN ST. LOUIS a tomcat brought home, uninjured, a parakeet. The next day, same city, another tomcat came home with another uninjured parakeet.

And in Canton, O., a fellow stood on his porch doing bird calls for 20 minutes before he could lure home a pet parakeet named

THEY ASSURED him the rockets couldn't hurt him. "I'm not worried about getting hurt," he replied. "I just hope they don't kill God."

When a 19-month-old baby in Little Rock, Ark., fell into a pond some ducks set up such a quacking the mother discovered the child's plight and the little girl's life was saved.

Speaking of kids, a small boy's parents took him to see a fireworks display in West Hartford, Conn., and noticed he closed his eyes tightly whenever sky rockets
